

Never before have the fortunate been so fked. And it's all their fault.

Logline

SUNK! follows two good-time chasing woolly mammoths, Chuck and Donny, after they sneak aboard Noah's Ark thinking it's a party cruise, oblivious to the fact it's the final cruise... for everyone.

Animated Always Sunny meets The Wolf of Wall Street set on a Righteous Gemstone's Noah's Ark.

Synopsis

SUNK! follows the wacky adventures of Chuck and Donny, two woolly mammoths who sneak aboard a Noah & Son's Couples' Cruise for a good time. The 40-day and 40-night cruise promises endless fun — from-all-you-can-eat buffets to headliners like Megan Thee Filly and Jay Zebra and, of course, their infamous White Fuego™ party, a boat-rockin' good time.

In order to slip on board, the mammoths need to skirt the couples-only rule, so Chuck volunteers to disguise himself as a woman, and his alter ego, Lady C, is born. Complete with wigs (sheep) and outfits (skimpy), Lady C is the public face of Chuck and every party's MVP. Like a marine, she's first in and last out.

With the cruise underway, narcissist Noah and his three dysfunctional sons, Japeth, Shem and Ham, jockey for power and bilk the passengers one overpriced frozen margarita at a time. It's a cartoon Succession on a cruise ship. They refuse to dock the ship long after the allotted time, despite the word of the Lord...of directors. Everything's destroyed and the money's pouring in, so what's the rush?

Synopsis con't

And while Noah & Sons are making billions, the passengers cruise unknowingly to their deaths, distracted from the truth by a well-placed chocolate fountain Donnyor Silly Hat Night in the Star Gazer Lounge. Frankly, it's embarrassingly easy.

Occasionally, Donny's gut tells him there's something fishy going on; he and Chuck should investigate, but between the breakfast conga line and underwater Boggle, who's got the time?

Especially once Donny catches a glimpse of the lovely Adelephant and falls hard. Which makes sense because elephants are just bald woolly mammoths. Will they or won't they? They won't if Noah has anything to say about it, because he's also hot for the beautiful superstar.

Show Tone

An anachronistic social satire examining the age-old question: Does it matter if the world ends tomorrow if tonight's going to be a good time? What about if it's a good, good time? Will we pleasure-seek our way into extinction? (Hint: The answer is yes.)

With the Ark loaded full of cruisers, staff and entertainment, there is a virtually endless cast of characters who are all in the same predicament, but are handling it very differently.

Our Heroes

Two best friends, one alter ego, livin' their best lives.

Donny

He shall lead his people to the party.

Chuck

And he shall turn that party out.

Lady C

Chuck's female alter ego and the apex partier.

Noah & Sons Cruise Lines

This family makes Succession look like Family Ties.

Noah, CEO

Another greedy, narcissistic billionaire.

Japeth, COO

White knuckling through ordinary life.

Shem, Cruise Director

New day, new foam party. Daddy's paying.

Ham, SCH

Speaks eloquently. Smells delicious.

The Lord of Directors

What they say goes. This is the word of the Lord...of Directors.

Chip

Japeth's AA chip and only friend.

Cruise Celebrities

Proving daily, they're NOT just like us.

Adelephant

For her, it isn't over.

Jay Zebra

Earned his stripes crushing mics.

Megan Thee Filly

Macaroni in a trough.

Pitbull

Mr. Arkwide

Bunny Bueno

Tell them I'm good.

Notorious B.E.A.R.

Mo' Honey, Mo' Problems

Doja Bear

Likes a lot of honey in her tea. Thinks he's a bear, but he's really a marsupial.

Justin BeeBear

Crew and Passengers

Meet some of the regulars.

Moses, Bartender

Used to part seas, but now he splits checks.

The Sabertooths

Their fangs are not as sharp as their tongues.

Fat Cheetahs

They took down prey,
running; now they take down
buffets, rolling.

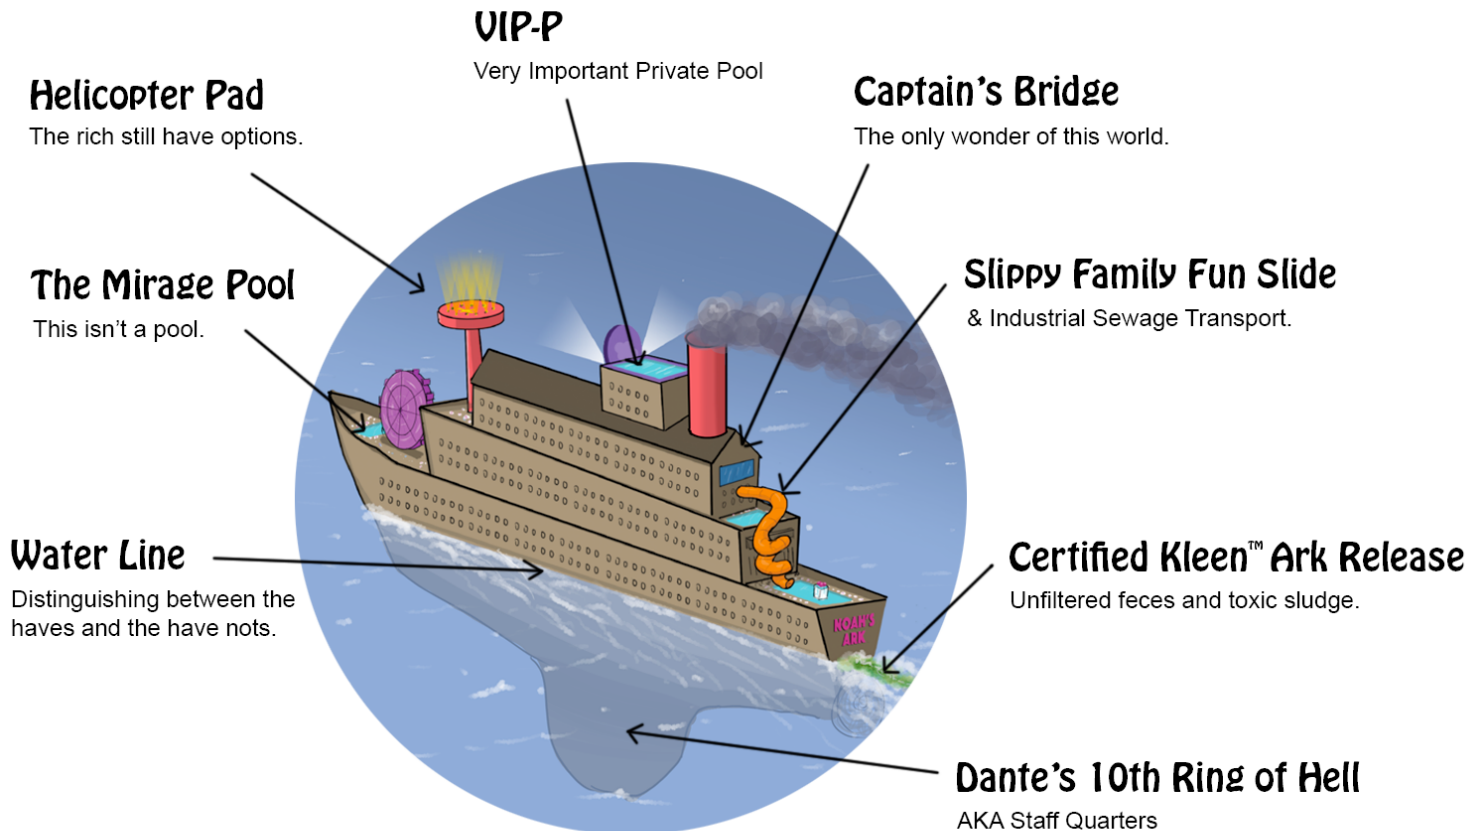

The Dodo Birds

The wind beneath each other's flightless wings.

The Ark

Like every cruise ship, you have two very distinct parts of the boat, separated by the Water Line. The cheesy Vegas hotel section for the guests with endless attractions wave pools, all-you-can-eat chocolate fountains, and comedy hypnotists; and the dark, dungeon-like labyrinth where the crew lives in their tiny rooms built like mortuary cabinets but with none of that sweet, sweet cooling.

And don't forget about the gold plated Captain's Bridge. It's like the Vatican, but with more women and better drugs.

Why this show?

Our socio-political-economic-religious satire aims to comment on the issues touching at the foundation of society, juxtaposed with a whimsical drawn animated style. We plan to hit on all the hot current points: irrational social division, lack of critical thinking, institutional racism, wealth discrepancy, fame seeking, corruption and the rest of current societies greatest hits, all in the safe, playful lens of a non-stop party cruise loaded with playful cartoon animals. And cartoons are fun, so let's all laugh together at this show, and ourselves, as we both drift off into a preventable extinction.

And after all, our two mammoths only saw "party" and missed the "couples" part when they hopped on this boat and we all know how that turned out. Wait...are we the mammoths?

Watch the Teaser!

Watch the SUNK! animated teaser, starring Sam Richardson and Andy St. Clair, at SunktheSeries.com